Picture: YouTube August 1, 1981, was a historic moment for music lovers across the United States. It was the opening date for the very first 24-hour all music video channel, MTV. This moment turned music from beats you could groove into something you could not only hear, but could also see. Music videos changed the face of music, and the first video to be shown on MTV was the ironic Video Killed Radio Star, from Buggles. Like other historically significant events, the MTV release was so important to so many people that they can remember exactly where they were when they sat with their friends to watch the next 24 hours of video. Do you remember where you were? The music videos on this list will take you back to your favorite moments in life. Who didn't go to Bohemian Rhapsody with their friends? Or did you just calm down while watching Smells Like Teen Spirit over the weekend? Do you get even more giddy when you watch a sketch-video of Take Me On from A-Ha? These music videos will take you back in time. But do you think you can figure out which video is which when you only have a picture to think about? Test yourself in this quiz! Other instruments used include acoustic guitars, pianos and saxophones. The oldest rock music in the 1940s featured common brass instruments as a major musical force, following the natural progression of jazz and big band music, which was popular at the time. In the 1950s, guitar became the main focus. Rock bands consist of a basic set of electric instruments that represent rhythm and melody. Many bands have two electric guitars, a lead guitar and a rhythm guitar. Percussion is an integral part of the rock music aesthetic, as it drives the tempo of the song and provides a unique intensity. While many rock bands have a standard drum kit, it is also possible to use a drum machine or computer program to simulate drum sounds. Bass, whether electric or acoustic, is another foundation of rock bands, but it is not a necessity. Many bands, such as White Stripes, have no bass guitar. Piano is another common instrument that is not necessarily a requirement. Some rock bands also have classic instruments such as violins and flutes. Determining the first rock and roll record is something of a claim that invented slices of bread - it's hard to analyze. As with television, the inventors of rock are diverse - many brilliant minds are working on the same thing mostly independently of each other. And as with television, the true invention of rock was perfected long before the status quo got into the hold of it. That's why although some claim Elvis Presley's That's Fine, mom as the first rock and roll record, others claim Rocket 88's Jackie Brenston as the rightful title holder. For decades, many rock fans claimed Rock Around The Clock (1954) Bill Haley and his comets as the first rock and roll record, but this was only the first rock record to enter the national consciousness (i.e., become a hit) if you count the more restrained doo-wop of penguins' Earth Angel (1954) (which was actually released after Rock Around The Clock, but became a hit in far less time). After a while, rock critics prevailed over popular opinion, which anchored Elvis's cover of That's All Right, Mama (1954) as the originator of the rock and roll genre. However, as rhythm and blues artists of the 1950s began to claim their rightful legacy as midwives of rock birth, other previous records began to appear in the public mind: Chief among them Jackie Brenston's Rocket 88 (1951), now widely regarded as the first rock song. However, the debate is not over. Turn the time machine back even further than Brenston's 1951 number and you'll find Fats Domino's The Fat Man (1950), Wynonie Harris' Good Rockin' Tonight (1948), and Freddie Slack's House of Blue Lights (1946). Some people nominated even earlier tunes, but they didn't get much critical or popular support. If you don't buy the Rocket 88, there are other pre-Elvis songs that you often mentioned in these such as Arthur Smith's Guitar Boogie (first national hit with electric guitar, 1948), The Dominoes' infamous Sixty Minute Man (1951), Lloyd Price's raw R&B schedule of Lawdy Miss Clawdy (1952), Big Mama Thornton's original version of Dog Dog (1953) and the Crows' remarkable Gee (1953). So what's the song that started rock and roll? Look closely, and Elvis and Bill Haley's songs seem to be the closest. Why? Rock and roll is a fusion of American popular music, and these two songs cover most of the country. Haley combined the jump blues with a western swing in The Clock, while Elvis, Scotty, and Bill mixed the ground collecting and screamed with pure blues and an uptempo shuffle. Elvis didn't invent rock and roll - no one - but gave it the world's biggest push, randomly and offhandedly creating rockabilly as a byproduct of the original experiment. By comparison, recordings that are as good or better than this performance do not measure in terms of musical cross pollination. Most of these songs work in one style - boogie or jump blues usually. Elvis and Haley's discs, for better or worse, sound like new musical forms, though there will always be those who say it's only because both men are white. However, hot on Elvis' heels was a young man named Chuck Berry who was about to transform an old country tune called Ida Red into a boot-stomping blues workout called Maybelline. Further proof that good music sees no color, and that rock and roll has always been bigger than anyone else's - bigger than all of us, in fact. The latest updates on December 18, 2020 Weeknights are wild. There are hobby meetings, sporting events, date nights, late-night work calls, children's bath time, TV show premieres (of course), and there is also ... Dinner? Trying to cram in making a recipe, eating dinner (let alone enjoying a meal) and cleaning the kitchen in less than an hour always seemed like it would take some divine intervention. Well, let me introduce you to a pressure cooker, a.k.a. a game changer. A pressure cooker is impossible. You can create a healthy, balanced meal in less than an hour from start to finish. Even decadent dishes such as braided short ribs or whole dishes such as salmon with potatoes and broccoli can be enjoyed from start to finish with a breeze on a weeknnt evening. Is there anything easier than throwing the whole meal into one pot and letting the pot do the work? He doesn't think anything of anything. It's as if you significantly upgrade an already kitchen staple, crockpot. Here are some of my favorite pressure cooker recipes to get dinner on the table under pressure:1. Ramen SoupFor those nights when all you need is a big hug, ramen is the perfect meal! High in anti-inflammatory ingredients such as fresh ginger, garlic and spinach this 20-minute soup is good for you in every way. This quick ramen is balanced by lean protein from chicken and soft-boiled eggs, starches from noodles, and salty it makes you desire more! If you want to come across this recipe even more nutritionally, try doubling carrots and spinach for extra vitamin power.~ Check out the recipe here!2. 4-minute Salmon, broccoli and potatoesWhat's better than a perfectly balanced meal in just 4 minutes? He doesn't think anything of anything! This wonderfully oily fish blends so well with super food broccoli and potato starch that you won't believe it's been done in such a short time! Salmon is a great source of omega-3 fatty acids (a.k.a. fish oil) that helps our heart, skin, joints, GI tract, and much more!~ Check out the recipe here!3. Beef GyrosA warm pita wrapped around freshly made gyroscopes, toppings, and even Tzatziki sauce, oh mine! This recipe goes from fridge to plate in less than an hour with just 15 minutes of preparation time! When creating Tzatziki sauce, be sure to grab plain Greek yogurt. This yogurt is naturally higher in protein, adding additional nutritional benefits to this great dish! You can also opt for wholegrain pita to add some extra thread too!~ Check out the recipe here!4. Shrimp BoilThose recipe is perfect for summer beach nights, classic shrimp cook recipe that you don't have to spend all day preparing! This recipe is fun finger food to the maximum! Kechi Chicken This take-out classic may be on plate in v 20-minutes, but you can pretend you took the clock to create when everyone asks for a recipe! You can double green peppers to enhance veggies without sacrificing any flavor. Serve this classic over brown rice for extra fiber and minerals.~ Check out the recipe here!17. MeatloafMeatloaf was a menu common because of sliced bread, but it never just took 20 minutes to make! This recipe contains chopped and hips to create a one-pot dream. Ideal to serve after long working days, this dish is a soothing routine. And don't be bemisied by the short cooking time, this meatloo is the best of both worlds--it's juicy and quick to make! ~ Check out the recipe here! Despite its obvious roots in the crockpot concept, pressure cooker meals are apt to be much healthier. Without the need for fat sauces to create flavor and prevent dryness, the pressure cooker uses heat generated by water to cook food. This leads to more dry taste and overall leaner dishes. Pressure cooker is the answer for anyone who strives for healthy, balanced meals with a crazy schedule at night. It really can do everything. You won't be disappointed and you'll feel great after enjoying healthy, balanced meals while easily juggling all the activities you like! Best photo credit: Unsplash via unsplash.com unsplash.com
